5 THINGS TO KNOW

WELCOME TO METRO.US

MORGAN ROUSSEAU, MANAGING EDITOR

Outspoken rapper Kanye West stopped by the White House on Thursday for a chat with President Donald Trump. West donned his red MAGA hat for The Don, and seemed to get an endorsement from the president for a 2024 run. Trump called West a "smart cookie," and West said his MAGA hat made him feel like Superman. All in all, it was a pretty lively lunch meeting. Head on over to pages 8-9 to learn more about their discussion, and visit metro.us for all of our political coverage.

DEVASTATION MARKS MICHAEL'S FLORIDA PATH

1 Hurricane Michael's assault on the Florida Panhandle left nothing more than empty foundations and heaps of rubble in some parts of the small towns it crashed into with near-record force. Communications outages and roads blocked by downed trees, strewn power lines and debris made it difficult to get an overall assessment on Thursday of the damage wrought by Michael, but the initial picture was grim. Michael smashed into Florida's northwest coast near the small town of Mexico Beach on Wednesday with screeching 155-mile-per-hour winds, pushing a wall of seawater inland. The sky cleared on Thursday, in contrast to the torrential rain of the previous day. Video shot by CNN from a helicopter showed homes closest to the water in Mexico Beach had lost all but their foundations. A few blocks inland, about half the homes were reduced to piles of wood and siding and those still standing suffered heavy damage. Michael, the third most powerful hurricane ever to hit the U.S. mainland, weakened overnight to a tropical storm and pushed northeast on Thursday, bringing drenching rains to Georgia and the Carolinas.

SPACE CREW SURVIVES PLUNGE TO EARTH

2 A two-man U.S.-Russian crew of a Soyuz spacecraft bound for the International Space Station was safe following a dramatic emergency landing on Thursday shortly after liftoff in Kazakhstan, when their rocket failed in mid-air. U.S. astronaut Nick Hague and Russian cosmonaut Alexei Ovchinin landed safely and rescue crews who raced to locate them on the Kazakh steppe quickly linked up with them, according to the U.S. space agency NASA and Russia's space agency Roscosmos. The emergency occurred as the first and second stages of a booster rocket separated shortly after launch from Kazakhstan's Soviet-era cosmodrome of Baikonur. The Soyuz capsule carrying the two men separated from the malfunctioning rocket and made what NASA called a steep ballistic descent to Earth with parachutes helping to slow its speed. A cloud of sand billowed up as the capsule came down on the desert steppe. The capsule took 34 minutes to reach the ground after it separated from the faulty rocket, NASA said. Rescue crews then raced to the scene to retrieve them, including paratroopers parachuting to their landing spot, helicopters and all-terrain vehicles, NASA said.

HARVEY WEINSTEIN ATTENDS COURT AS JUDGE MULLS FUTURE OF SEX ASSAULT CASE

3 Disgraced movie mogul Harvey Weinstein waves while arriving at state supreme court in New York on Thursday. Weinstein's lawyer, Benjamin Brafman, has said in court filings that prosecutors withheld evidence that would have made the grand jury think twice about charging him, such as friendly emails one accuser sent after the alleged rape.

SINGAPORE AIR TO RESUME WORLD'S LONGEST FLIGHT

4 Singapore Airlines Ltd. is poised for a major boost to its U.S. footprint from Thursday evening as it resumes, after five years, the world's longest commercial flight — a near-19 hour nonstop from Singapore to New York. The route will give the premium Asian carrier its biggest-ever U.S. presence. The airline has already ordered seven new ultra-long-range twin-engine Airbus SE A350-900ULRs fitted with just 161 business class and premium economy seats — and no economy class seats — for the U.S. capacity increase. Singapore Airlines had abandoned the marathon Newark and Los Angeles routes in 2013 when high fuel prices made the use of four-engine Airbus A340-500 jets uneconomic. It has since flown to New York's JFK Airport via Frankfurt and to Los Angeles via Tokyo and Seoul. The airline's revenue contribution from the Americas region is currently at 14 percent, down from 20 percent in 2013 due to the loss of the nonstop flights, Corrine Png, CEO of transport research firm Crucial Perspective, said.

NEW YORK'S REGISTER-TO-VOTE DEADLINE IS TODAY

5 With the 2018 midterm elections just over three weeks away, the last day to register to vote in the state of New York is upon us. That's right, if you want to make your voice heard at the polls in the coming 2018 midterm elections on Nov. 6, you have until Friday, Oct. 12 to register to vote.
To see if you're registered to vote in New York state, visit voterlookup.elections.ny.gov. New Yorkers who still need to register to vote can do so at their county board of elections or at a state agency-based voter registration center. Printable forms you can take to those sites are available at elections.ny.gov. They can also register online via the Department of Motor Vehicles, which usually takes about five minutes. You'll need a valid NYS driver's license, permit or non-driver ID, the last four digits of your Social Security number and current zip code to get started. To register to vote, you must be a U.S. citizen, 18 years old by the end of the year, not be in prison or on parole for a felony conviction and not claim the right to vote elsewhere. New coalition wants Cuomo's AirTrain LGA to become a reality

LaGuardia is the only major East Coast airport without a rail connection. AirTrain LGA would change that — and the daunting trip to and from.

nikki.mascali@metro.us

LaGuardia Airport is the only major East Coast airport without a direct rail connection, so getting there can often feel as long as that security line or trip to get to your final destination. However, a newly formed coalition aims to change that by throwing its support behind Gov. Andrew Cuomo's proposed AirTrain LGA.

Called A Better Way to LGA, the coalition is co-chaired by Queens Chamber of Commerce, Association for a Better New York and New York Building Congress and includes community members, transportation advocates, local business leaders and more.

"LaGuardia is currently undergoing an $8 billion transformation to reimagine the airport for the 21st century, and it's essential that the development of AirTrain LGA be a part of that vision," said Carlo A. Scissura of the New York Building Congress. "As New York's population and tourism industry continue to grow, ensuring people can efficiently travel to and from our region's airports is one of our most crucial priorities."

Travel times to and from LaGuardia Airport are expected to increase by up to 50 percent by 2045, causing more congestion and environmental impact. The next step to make the AirTrain LGA a reality is an environmental review, which the coalition urges be completed by Q4 2019.

LaGuardia is the only major East Coast airport without a rail connection. AirTrain LGA would change that — and the daunting trip to and from. PROVIDED

Such rail service has "proven effective" locally, the coalition said, as AirTrain Newark saw more than 21 million paid passengers and AirTrain JFK more than 58 million between 2007 and 2016.

A plan of Gov. Andrew Cuomo, AirTrain LGA would connect to public transit at Willets Point to relieve congestion at LaGuardia Airport, where more than 29 million travelers flew into and out of last year.

As part of the plan, Willets Point Station would be modernized and redesigned for travelers with luggage and made ADA-accessible to ensure a smooth transition to AirTrain LGA. Travelers from Manhattan would reach the station in 16 minutes on the LIRR thanks to direct, nonstop service from Penn Station and eventually Grand Central Terminal upon completion of East Side Access.

From Willets Point, it would take six minutes to get to LaGuardia Airport. As an alternative, straphangers could take the 7 train to Willets Point and transfer to AirTrain LGA.

New center at Brooklyn Navy Yard will prepare high schoolers for STEAM jobs

A rendering of the entry to the planned Brooklyn STEAM Center at Brooklyn Navy Yard. PROVIDED BY BNYDC

The Brooklyn STEAM Center will be located at Building 77 within the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

A new STEAM center planned for the Brooklyn Navy Yard would help provide students with real-world work experience in emerging tech professions, officials say.

Brooklyn Borough President Eric L. Adams and New York City Schools Chancellor Richard Carranza unveiled this week plans for the Brooklyn STEAM Center, which they billed as a "state-of-the-art educational hub."

STEAM stands for science, technology, engineering, arts and mathematics, and the new Brooklyn Navy Yard center aims to provide high schoolers with educational courses, work experience and professional contacts in those fields.

"High-quality Career and Technical Education is a critical part of our Equity & Excellence for All agenda to put every student on the path to college and careers," Carranza said in a statement. "The new, first-of-its-kind Brooklyn STEAM Center is an invaluable investment and will give Brooklyn students a new access point for active, real-world learning experiences."

The center will be on the third floor of Building 77 at Brooklyn Navy Yard and will serve, at capacity, 350 to 400 total high school juniors and seniors from eight Brooklyn public schools each year.

The Brooklyn Navy Yard has become one of the city's fastest growing tech hubs and the center of a surge in manufacturing. The Brooklyn Navy Yard Development Corporation (BNYDC) recently reported the most single-year hires in its 19-year history, with the manufacturing field taking up the majority of those new roles.

"The new, first-of-its-kind Brooklyn STEAM Center is an invaluable investment and will give Brooklyn students a new access point for active, real-world learning experiences."
New York City Schools Chancellor Richard Carranza

The Brooklyn STEAM Center will help prepare even more New York City residents for those kinds of jobs, officials say. The Center comes out of a partnership between the New York City Department of Education and BNYDC.

The curriculums at the STEAM Center will focus on five career paths, which officials say were selected because of their presence at the Brooklyn Navy Yard as well as their overall job market potential. Those pathways are computer science, construction technology, culinary arts and business, design and engineering, and film and media.

Though the STEAM center will serve enrolled juniors and seniors, New York City students will be first introduced to the program as freshman and sophomores so that they can be familiarized with the Brooklyn Navy Yard and the program's core requirements.

The first group of Brooklyn STEAM Center students were picked in the 2015-16 school year as freshman. Currently the center is (temporarily) located at two sites, the Boys and Girls High School and the George Wingate Education Complex in East Flatbush.

Kanye defends support for Trump

Among the important topics discussed: new planes for Air Force One.

Rapper Kanye West, with a stream-of-consciousness speech in the Oval Office and a burst of profanity, defended his support for President Donald Trump on Thursday, to the great delight of Trump himself.

The event was billed as a lunch at the White House to discuss prison reform, jobs for African-Americans and Chicago violence. Those items were addressed in a pre-lunch meeting, but Kanye launched into a speech and Trump let him go on as the cameras recorded it all.

But in between, Kanye spoke of alternative universes, a new plane that Trump should consider as his next Air Force One, his diagnosis of bipolar disorder that he said was actually sleep deprivation, and living in a household dominated by females given his marriage to reality TV star Kim Kardashian West.

Kanye later said his 10-minute speech was "from the soul, I just channeled it." Trump lapped it all up.

"That was quite something," said Trump, who was joined in the Oval Office by Hall of Fame NFL running back Jim Brown, who smiled and sat quietly through most of the event.

Kanye came to the White House clearly with a lot on his mind, chiefly his support for the president.

"I had the balls to put on this hat," the 41-year-old artist said in defending the red "Make America Great Again" hat that he wore for his meeting.

It was the first of several off-color remarks Kanye would drop in the Oval Office, including this line: "He might not have expected to have a crazy motherf— like Kanye West run up and support."

The award-winning musician has taken fire from other celebrities for his support for Trump, particularly after his recent appearance on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" show.

West rejected the criticism.

"People expect that if you're black you have to be Democrat," he said. "What I need 'Saturday Night Live' to improve on, what I need the liberals to improve on: if he don't look good, we don't look good," Kanye said, gesturing at Trump.

Kanye also said he would like Trump to ditch talk about persuading police in Chicago to institute "stop and frisk" policies to crack down on crime and violence.

"I didn't mean to put you on the [spot], bro," Kanye told Trump, who said "I'm open to everything" about the subject. REUTERS

Monday declared NYCFC Soccer Day across city

Fans, players and partners will gather for soccer-centered festivities.

NIKKI M. MASCALI

NYCFC Soccer Day will join together New York City Football Club fans, players and partners for a wide range of soccer-centered festivities. NYCFC

Forget the World Cup, which had New York City going wild for soccer — er, football — earlier this summer. The sport is getting its very own day across the five boroughs on Monday, which has been declared NYCFC Soccer Day.

NYCFC Soccer Day will feature players from the New York City Football Club, which has been competing in Major League Soccer (MLS) since 2015. It aims to celebrate the next 10 soccer pitches funded by the New York City Soccer Initiative (NYCSI), which provides free healthy, active-living and mentorship programming for kids across the city.

The initiative began in 2016 as a $3 million public-private partnership to create and maintain 50 soccer pitches in underused public spaces in underserved neighborhoods. It has since rolled out across the country, and 20 of those pitches will be in use in New York by year-end.

NYCFC Soccer Day "will be a first-of-its-kind celebration of our sport and is a testament to how soccer is continuing to grow throughout our city," NYCFC President Jon Patricof said. "Opening new pitches each fall has become a special annual event we look forward to. We have seen how these pitches have become community hubs that bring people together around soccer, and we are proud to be a leader in increasing access to our sport and safe places to play."

What should you expect on NYCFC Soccer Day? It will join together fans, players and partner organizations for festivities across New York City. Here's some of the day's activities:

An official ribbon-cutting will take place at Hostos-Lincoln Academy of Science/PS X010/IS 584/University Prep Charter High School in the South Bronx. Guests include NYCFC first-team players, Roger Bennett of "Men in Blazers" and more.

Readings from a city-wide youth poetry contest centered on soccer as well as matches for kids will also be part of the ceremony.

There will also be ribbon-cuttings and NYCFC Soccer Day festivals on all 10 of the new pitches across the city. Goya Foods will hold youth clinics on two pitches and soccer will take over the YES Network.

More than 300 local students will be gifted free tickets to NYCFC's first home playoff match at Yankee Stadium to celebrate the club clinching the playoffs for three consecutive years.

For more info, visit nycfc.com. NYCSI is supported by NYCFC, U.S. Soccer Foundation, Adidas, Eithad Airways and the Mayor's Fund to Advance New York City.

WALK WITH PURPOSE
Take note, pedestrians. If you're on a busy sidewalk or staircase, walk with purpose. People are trying to get places, so if you're aimlessly wandering around, looking at your phone and zigzagging from side to side, you're just getting in people's way. Know where you're going and walk in a straight line so you don't bump into everyone else who's out and about. And if you're lost, don't stand in the middle of the frickin' sidewalk as you try to make your GPS work. Step to the side, get out of the way and let people who actually know where they're going get there. Have some situational awareness, please.

Aries Keep an open mind when dealing with a partner or someone in charge. It's in your best interest to keep a positive attitude if you want to promote some of your own ideas.

Taurus You've got swagger, so strut your stuff. You'll be noticed by both friend and foe. Put any anger you harbor on the back burner and make positive gestures that will satisfy everyone.

Gemini Finish what you start and head into the weekend with a clear conscience. Kind gestures toward your peers will help you build strong alliances that will eventually pay off.

Cancer Give a little, take a little but, most of all, participate. You'll gain perspective from the people you encounter. An important relationship will strengthen if you discuss its prospects.

Leo Don't take sides. Avoid an argument at all costs. Indulgence may mask a problem, but it won't solve it. Positive change begins within. Focus on self-improvement.

Virgo Speak up and say what's on your mind. Your contribution will change the way others view you and open a door to better days ahead. Romance is on the rise.

Libra Make a positive change at home. Getting along with family or roommates will impact the way you handle other matters.

Scorpio Put your best foot forward and share the love with everyone you meet. Embrace the unknown and unfamiliar, and learn from the experiences you have.

Sagittarius Focus on the physical action you can take to improve your professional relationships and your reputation, status and position. Network and offer suggestions and hands-on help.

Capricorn Know who and what you are up against when doing business or making a change that could affect others as much as it does you. Look out for those less fortunate.

Aquarius Don't disregard what others do. Someone will try to slip something past you or manipulate you to take part in something that you should avoid. Handle your own affairs personally.

Pisces Don't mix emotions and money. You stand to gain if you are direct and you control what happens regarding contracts, investments and health matters. A gift or money is heading your way. EUGENIA LAST

How politics and religion influenced the terrifying mythology of 'Apostle'

Michael Sheen and Gareth Evans talk us through their Netflix period horror.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Take a trip back in time with Michael Sheen and Gareth Evans. WARREN ORCHARD / NETFLIX

"Apostle" is terrifying for a number of reasons.

Not only is it the kind of horror film that creeps under your skin and patiently distresses you with its atmosphere and suspense, but there are also scenes of quick, brutal horror and violence that immediately make you recoil, too.

A big reason for its success is the potent Welsh combination of writer and director Gareth Evans and the titanic performance of Michael Sheen, who plays Malcolm, the leader of a reclusive Welsh religious cult holding Thomas Richardson (Dan Stevens)'s sister for ransom. Richardson travels to the remote island they call home to save her, but soon becomes embroiled in its dark and dangerous world.

Both men told Metro that they used real political and religious events from Welsh history as inspiration to build the twisted and terrifying mythology of the film.

"It is not often that I get to play a character Welsh," explains Sheen. "We wondered where this character should be from. I got really interested in what was going on around Wales at that time with the Welsh revival in 1905.

"So there was something interesting going on with religion and politics, the Labour Party was just starting to emerge with the unions and working people were getting representation in a new way. There was a growing thing in the South Wales area, where I come from," he adds. "It wasn't like I was drawing on real figures. It was just getting the sense of the currents and what was going on at that time."

Sheen felt as if his character "would have been a political prisoner of some kind.

"I could see how a figure like that, with what was going on in the chapels across Wales and politically, could find himself in this situation," says the actor. "I thought it would be an interesting way to explore that. I loved giving the barnstorming, preacher stuff at the beginning in Welsh, too, it just seemed to suit it really well."

"It was something that kind of grew and became more detailed as we added more and more layers to it," adds Evans. "We would throw images and ideas and storylines together, all of which built up what the island might be, what the belief system was, what were the differences between the ideology of Malcolm's politics and the theology of the religion that he preaches, or pretends to preach. It all started to come together."

"Apostle" is now available to stream on Netflix.

Tiffany Haddish and Ike Barinholtz have figured out how to avoid political arguments

The duo discusses their new flick "The Oath."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Tiffany Haddish and Ike Barinholtz get political (sort of) with "The Oath." ROADSIDE ATTRACTIONS

You might have heard, but a few years ago, the United States elected a new president that quite a lot of people have quite a lot of problems with. Donald Trump's election victory, which came just a few weeks before Thanksgiving, was undoubtedly the catalyst for millions of arguments that holiday.

At the same time, it sparked Ike Barinholtz with the idea to write and direct "The Oath," which follows a politically divided family at Thanksgiving shortly after the U.S. government demands that all citizens sign a loyalty pledge. Metro chatted with Barinholtz and star Tiffany Haddish, who play the married couple hosting dinner in "The Oath," and both were happy to explain how they avoid such disputes that are at the heart of the drama-comedy.

"I will literally cry sometimes, like, 'God dammit I am leaving my daughter to a pack of wolves that is just getting bigger,'" says Barinoltz. "But at the same time you can't let that dictate."

"You don't want her looking back when you are dead going, 'Oh God. Daddy was always mad about the news,'" he adds. "You have to find those moments with them and be happy with them and only them. It is finding that balance and trying to do better."

"I like to try to change the subject and not even go there," says Haddish. "You know your family members."

"And if you know that this person gets really hostile about those kind of things then I try not to talk about that," she adds. "But if it does go there, and things start to escalate, I try to crack jokes or I just remove myself from the whole situation all together."

Barinholtz wasn't always able to back of political arguments, though.

"I actually was like my character. I am getting better," says Barinholtz. "I was really the guy who was consuming too much news, reading every article, every Twitter thread, every MSNBC piece, Fox News piece, I was watching it all, and letting it dictate my life. I would just want to talk about it at every party and dinner."

Barinholtz put all of this aggression and division into the screenplay, which Haddish insists "resonated with my spirit," even if the character of Kai was a "lot quieter, a lot more still" than she is accustomed to playing.

"But it was the family dynamic and how everyone communicated, for me it was like every family," says Haddish. "I have lived with a lot of families and seen how families argue, and they all argue the same. All families are crazy."

"The movie is not really about politics," Barinholtz explains. "It is about family and them reacting to this modern, political world that we live in, which is so absurd and heightened and funny."

"The worst thing that this comes off as liberal porn, where all the liberals are great and the red people are assholes but they learned a lesson," he adds. "That's not life, that's not America. I really wanted to reflect what we are seeing in America right now."

"The Oath" is now in theaters.

The real reason why 'First Man' doesn't have many American flags

When "First Man" premiered at the Venice and Toronto film festivals just a few weeks ago, the initial buzz surrounding it immediately heaped praise on pretty much every aspect of Damien Chazelle's retelling of Neil Armstrong's mission to the moon, and it was soon labeled an Oscar front-runner.

But while Ryan Gosling and Claire Foy's performances, Chazelle's direction, Justin Hurwitz's score and Tom Cross' editing were rightfully lauded, one particularly bizarre controversy soon started to engulf the film.

Apparently there weren't enough American flags in "First Man," which left some people furious, including Donald Trump, who remarked, "It's almost like they're embarrassed at the achievement coming from America."

According to Cross, there's a reason behind the lack of flags.

Fly to the moon with Ryan Gosling in "First Man." UNIVERSAL PICTURES / DREAMWORKS PICTURES

"Our movie was trying to be a more personal and intimate portrait of Neil Armstrong and his family," says Cross. "We were always aware of Neil Armstrong as an icon. I think something that we thought would be special with this movie was to show things that the audience hasn't seen before.

"I kept on going back to Damien's initial directive regarding the character and the story. Let's try to make this as intimate and personal as possible," he added. "We thought that if we did our job right we could show the audience something that they haven't seen before."

"First Man" is now in theaters.

An abstract master arrives in the U.S.

You don't know the name Hilma af Klint, and that's because she wanted it that way. The Swedish artist worked from the beginning of the 1900s to create large, colorful canvases filled with a world only she could see — Mondrian, Kandinsky and other modern masters merely scrambled to catch up — but also insisted they not be displayed until 20 years after her death. Beginning this Friday, the Guggenheim Museum is showing the first major solo exhibition of her work in the United States. Oct. 12-April 23, 2019, 1071 Fifth Ave., guggenheim.org

Taste the coffee trends of 2018

The best of the coffee world gather for the New York Coffee Festival 2018, with over 80 exhibitors showing — and, more importantly, pouring — their new products, plus a latte art competition, a sensory tasting experience, a coffee cocktail bar, live entertainment and, of course, unlimited tastings of coffee from all over the world. Oct. 13-14, Metropolitan Pavilion, 125 W. 18th St., $29-$110, newyorkcoffeefestival.com

The best fall treats all in one place

NYC's first sweets-only food festival (and in our opinion, one of the best) Dessert Goals returns for two weekends in Long Island City. Taste your way through more than 20 vendors and be the first to try new treats like People's Pops dipping sauces — all with waterfront views of Manhattan. VIP tickets include an extra half-hour of tasting and a swag bag. Oct. 13-14 & 20-21, Sound River Studios, 4-40 44th Dr., Queens, $12-$35, dessertgoals.com

The pizza exhibit we've been waiting for

This Saturday is the grand opening of the much-hyped Museum of Pizza, with its artistic take on one of the world's messiest foods, from actual fine art to selfie-ready installations, a "pizza beach" and a cheese cave. Activities will include pizza meditations and film screenings. Your ticket is also good for a slice, redeemable after your tour. Oct. 13-Nov. 18, Tues-Sun, 10 a.m.-7 p.m., William Vale Hotel, 55 Wythe Ave., Williamsburg, $40 and up, themuseumofpizza.org

Peek inside Brooklyn's artist studios

Finding studio space in the city isn't easy, which is why foundations like the nonprofit Chashama that help creative people get the low-cost workspaces they need are essential to keeping New York's identity evolving. Almost 100 artists who work at the Brooklyn Army Terminal are taking part in Open Studios Weekend, inviting the public to view their works and buy something new — most are priced under $1,000. Oct. 13-14, noon-5 p.m., 140 58th St., Buildings A and B, Sunset Park, free, chashama.org

You'll want to get into these pickles

It's time again for a Lower East Side tradition: Pickle Day, when more than 20 pickling masters line up for three blocks of fermented foodie bliss — samples are free, of course. Supplement your diet with eats by 30 local eateries plus games, live music and giveaways. Oct. 14, noon-5 p.m., Orchard Street between Delancey and Houston streets, free entry, pickleday.nyc

A festival of all things CBD

This weekend's Hester Street Fair is dedicated to the hottest trend in the wellness world: CBD, the non-hallucinogenic compound in marijuana that mellows anxiety. Should come in handy now that the Halloween scares are beginning to ramp up. Meet one of the first CBD-focused wellness outfits the Bowery Cannabis Club, try the new all-CBD bakery Feelz by Chloe and more. Oct. 14, 11 a.m.-6 p.m., corner of Hester and Essex streets, free admission, hesterstreetfair.com

Sisterhood of the folksy rockers

What we need after the last two weeks of hideous news cycles is a good, cleansing cry with the Indigo Girls. Catch the duo at the Beacon Theatre on Sunday. Oct. 14, doors at 7 p.m., $79 and up, bowerypresents.com

The Chargers have only two losses on the season - to the Chiefs and Rams, the two best teams in football. They are only favored by one point at Cleveland. The Browns are much improved but they're not yet equipped to string together two wins in a row, particularly two wins in a row over good teams.

Jets host Colts: What to watch for

The Jets go for their second-straight win against Andrew Luck and the Colts.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

Don't look now, but the New York Jets are just one game back of the AFC East divisional lead through five games this season.

The rebuild has been promising, despite being on the wrong end of the Cleveland Browns' first win since 2016. But the Jets ended a three-game skid last week in a convincing win over the Denver Broncos. Now they have an opportunity to win consecutive games for the first time since Weeks 3-5 during the 2017 season.

The Indianapolis Colts come to visit on Sunday afternoon (1 p.m. ET, CBS), a 1-4 side that just can't find a way to stay healthy. While quarterback Andrew Luck is finally back, he will be without No. 1 wide receiver T.Y. Hilton and top tight end Jack Doyle once again in Week 6.

Here is what to watch out for as the Jets look to nab win No. 3 on the year.

CROWELL RUNS OFFENSE

Joe Namath is going to be in attendance as the Jets celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Super Bowl III-winning team. He'll get an up-close and personal look at Sam Darnold, the quarterback who is expected to be the franchise's greatest passer since the Hall-of-Famer.

The thing is that the Jets experience most of their success when their running game is effective, which means it all comes down to Isaiah Crowell.

The 25-year-old running back is coming off a career day in Week 5 when he thrashed the Broncos defense for 219 yards on just 15 carries. It's the second time this season that he's gone for over 100 yards in a game which just so happened to occur during the Jets Week 1 win over the Detroit Lions.

Coincidence? I think not. Feed Crowell the ball to keep the Colts defense honest and let him open up big-play passing opportunities for Darnold.

JETS SECONDARY COULD BE UNDER SIEGE

There has been some disarray within the Jets defense with the sudden absence of coordinator Kasey Rodgers.

While head coach Todd Bowles called the plays for the defense last week, Broncos quarterback Case Keenum put up 377 yards and a pair of touchdowns.

Two of New York's best cornerbacks, Trumaine Johnson and Buster Skrine are not expected to play on Sunday. Johnson has a quad issue while Skrine remains in concussion protocol.

Over his past two games, Luck has thrown for a combined 829 yards and seven touchdowns. Against a shorthanded Jets defense, we could see another big performance from him even with no Hilton or Doyle.

Is Aaron Boone right for Yankees?

The first season of Aaron Boone as New York Yankees manager, a 100-win season, is over much earlier than expected.

The Boston Red Sox eliminated the Yankees on Tuesday night in Game 4 of the ALDS, a 4-3 victory allowing New York's arch-rivals to celebrate in the Bronx.

It's a disappointing and maddening end to a season as Yankees fans are in the throes of overreactions while using that silly platform that is social media to air their grievances.

Among the complaints, desires and suggestions are (and this is just a summary):

-Get rid of Giancarlo Stanton

-Sign Manny Machado and/or Bryce Harper

-Go get starting pitching

-Fire Aaron Boone

That last one is a peculiar idea, one that has been repeated by Yankees fans throughout a mediocre second half of the season.

Boone was basically handed the keys to a roster that is the equivalent of a Ferrari. With the kind of talent they had — from Stanton, to Aaron Judge, to Gleyber Torres, to Miguel Andujar, to Luke Voit (from the rafters, might I add), to a dominant bullpen — there's a good chance management could pick out a fan from the mezzanine level of Yankee Stadium, give them a uniform and they could manage to win 90-plus games with that team.

Winning 100 games is quite an accomplishment and was almost expected from an entitled Yankees fanbase, but the ALDS against the Red Sox showed that New York has to reach another level of success and chemistry to legitimately challenge for a World Series title.

It was Boone who is drawing much of the criticism given the way he handled things in Games 3 and 4 of the series.

The vitriol began when he left a seemingly unprepared Luis Severino in Game 3 after he allowed three runs in the opening three innings. Rather than hand things over to his dominant bullpen, Boone let the struggling 24-year-old, who had a terrible second half of the season, go out for the fourth inning.

In a blink of an eye, the bases were loaded with no outs, forcing Boone to try and play damage control. He opted to bring in Lance Lynn, normally a starter, to relieve Severino and enter a situation even the best of relievers would have difficulties getting out of unscathed. A hit batter and a bases-clearing double later and the game was over as the Red Sox went on to hand the Yankees their worst postseason loss in franchise history, 16-1.

Aaron Boone was outmanaged in the ALDS. GETTY IMAGES

You would think he would have learned his lesson about leaving his starter in too long, right?

Wrong.

The very next night in Game 4, Boone kept veteran southpaw CC Sabathia in to pitch the third inning after narrowly getting out of a bases-loaded jam in the first where Ian Kinsler hit a two-out fly ball to the warning track in left field that looked like a grand slam off the bat.

It was clear Sabathia didn't have his best stuff, but there he was going through the Red Sox order for a second time, a decision that would cost Boone and the Yankees their season. The Red Sox scored three in the third and another in the fourth, which was just enough to survive a furious bottom-of-the-ninth comeback to move on to the ALCS.

There obviously plenty of blame that has to be placed on the players' shoulders as the Yankees looked defeated for most of Game 4. But Boone will be left to overthink and answer for the decisions he made, which at the end of the day were the wrong ones as a Yankees team that was supposed to be playing deep into the final weeks of October are now dusting off their golf bags.

Does that cost him his job? Not likely. But Boone will have to do a lot to prove that he is the right manager for the Yankees and it might mean tightening up the ship.

Baseball is in an age where the "player's manager" prevails; someone who will come in and make friends with his teams in order to get in their good graces. Long gone are the days (that didn't seem so long ago) of Joe Torre, Bobby Cox, Tony LaRussa and Tommy Lasorda that prioritized winning over analytics, sabermetrics and friendship.

This isn't Little League.

Having a few players dislike you is a small price to pay for a World Series ring, maybe that's something Boone needs to consider this winter. JOE PANTORNO

INDIANAPOLIS COLTS AT NEW YORK JETS (-2.5)

The Jets once again appear to be in a good spot to cover at home. They're nominal favorites over a Colts team that plays their fourth road game in their last five weeks. Indy has regressed since a solid 21-9 win at Washington, as they dropped a winnable game at Philly before a confounding loss to Houston at home. They weren't expected to be competitive with New England last week, and they weren't, though some garbage time scoring made that game look closer than it really was.

Sam Darnold was only 10 for 22 last week but tossed three TDs. He's still getting acclimated to the speed of the professional game, but the Colts' porous defense offers him a great opportunity on Sunday. Indy is 27th in points per game allowed and the same mark in passing yards per game allowed.

Isaiah Crowell broke out for over 200 rushing yards last week, continuing the Jets' solid production on the ground in 2018. Crowell and Bilal Powell have led the sixth-best running game in the league by yards per contest through five weeks.

Andrew Luck should be able to air it out with regularity against a soft New York defense (16th by passing yards per game), but it may not be enough for the Colts to cover. Expect the Jets to build on their 8-3 run against the spread at MetLife Stadium.

THE PICK: JETS -2.5

Sam Darnold and the Jets are favored at home against the Colts. MetroBet says go with them. GETTY IMAGES

KC CHIEFS AT NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS (-3.5)

This Sunday night AFC showdown between the Chiefs and Patriots promises to be a barnburner, as the betting total was set at a stratospheric 59 points.

Undefeated Kansas City is also a perfect 5-0 against the spread this year. Patrick Mahomes has been a revelation under center, and the young signal caller has demonstrated plenty of poise on the road. He's tossed 11 TD passes away from Arrowhead Stadium and has yet to allow an INT. New England's shoddy defense should hardly be able to contain Tyreek Hill and Kareem Hunt in this one, as the Chiefs are fourth in the NFL in yards per play.

The Patriots' offense appears to be rounding into form after two straight 38-point outputs by Tom Brady and company. The Chiefs' stoppers have been largely ineffective all season, ranking 19th in points per game allowed, 24th in rushing yards per game allowed, and 31st in passing yards per game allowed. New England has also trended well at home, covering in nine of their last 10 at Gillette Stadium.

However, Kansas City has been incredible in the underdog role, covering in seven of their last eight contests. And it's worth noting that the favorite is 1-7-1 ATS in the last nine Sunday night games, per oddsshark.com.
